

The floor plan illustrates a complex layout of a building, possibly a school or administrative office. It features a central corridor system that provides access to a large number of individual rooms. Each room is meticulously labeled with a unique identifier, such as '3C.1' through '3C.10', and a specific name, often starting with 'CABINETTE' (e.g., 'CABINETTE 55', 'CABINETTE 56', etc.). The rooms are organized in a systematic, grid-like fashion, with the central corridor acting as the primary circulation route. The plan also includes various architectural symbols, such as door swings, window placements, and furniture arrangements, which are detailed in a legend located in the bottom right corner. The overall design suggests a functional and organized environment, with clear pathways and designated spaces for different activities.
